THE TRUTH ABOUT IDENTITY FRAUD

THE GOOD NEWS ABOUT IDENTITY THEFT

Identity theft has little to do with credit cards, which the banks fix for us. But in virtually all cases of identity theft, resulting in criminal identity fraud*, the victim could prove they were not the perpetrator of the fraud. And since we can't prevent the theft, it's good to know we're able to undo the damage.

THE UNTOLD NEWS ABOUT IDENTITY THEFT

We can survive the ordeal of identity fraud, but the thief took something more valuable than our identity. They robbed us of our time, forcing us to do whatever it takes, for as long as it takes (which can be countless hours, months, or even years), to restore our identity.

SOME MORE GOOD NEWS ABOUT IDENTITY THEFT

With some personal identity management, you can be prepared to respond when you become a victim. And if you can afford the time to restore your own identity, there are great resources to do so. But if you don't have the time, we can do whatever it takes, for as long as it takes, to restore your identity.

*Using your identity, perpetrators can open new financial accounts, apply for loans, access your medical records, receive medical care, drugs, can rent apartments, file fraudulent tax returns, obtain welfare, unemployment, social security benefits, get a driver's license, and commit crimes, all in your name.
